Threat to blow up Mumbai World Trade Center

20:55, May 23, 2007

Security at India's financial capital Mumbai's World Trade Center was beefed up Wednesday after the police got an anonymous letter threatening to blow up the high rise twin towers on Thursday, Indo-Asian News Service (IANS) reported.

The letter was received by the World Trade Center at south Mumbai's Cuffe Parade area Tuesday and sent to the police commissioner's office.

"The letter threatened to blow up the twin towers on May 24. The letter, however, did not give any specific reason for blowing it up," IANS quoted deputy commissioner of police Brijesh Singh as saying.

"Following the threat we have beefed up security in and around the twin towers and are also conducting a thorough search of the premises. We are keeping a close watch on people visiting the buildings. We are not taking any chances," Singh said.

“Mind to Mind and Heart to Heart”

Governor Huntsman Heads Business and Education Leaders on Successful Trade Mission to India

Governor Huntsman and over a dozen business and education leaders have just returned from a two week trade mission to India. Organized by the Governor's Office of Economic Development (GOED) the mission created new business and education relationships which will help Utah companies grow and open new opportunities to sell Utah developed technology and products which would not have been possible without the many face-to-face meetings that were arranged for the trade mission participants.

Lew Cramer, CEO and President of the World Trade Center Utah summed up the experience when he echoed the mind and heart theme with the work load of the mission. “The Governor’s Office of Economic Development under Executive Director, Jason Perry and the mission organizer, Director, Franz Kolb did an outstanding job in arraigning our meetings and managing the incredible logistics that were required to accomplish a trade mission half a world away from home.” Cramer continued, “Our informal motto on the mission was ‘contacts and contracts’ and we got bundles of both. During the trade mission what we all did every day was work- work- work, but because of that work we all were able to establish a deeper and more personal business relationship with leaders in India which will insure increased opportunities as both our economies become more interdependent in the future.”
